ISSN 0041-7904

LIBRARY OF CONGRESS INFORMATION BULLETIN

Vol. 44, No. 52 December 30, 1985

Library of Congress Endorses New ABC/PBS Adult Literacy Project

The Center for the Book in the Library of Congress hosted a December 10 press conference at which the American Broadcasting Companies, Inc. (ABC) and the Public Broadcasting Service (PBS) announced a joint public service campaign to combat the problem of adult illiteracy in the United States. "Project Literacy U.S." (PLUS) will operate in two phases: outreach development (from now through summer 1986) and awareness-raising through on-air programming on both ABC and PBS from September 1986 through June 1987.

"This announcement of a unique national collaboration between a commercial television network and the public television system underscores the seriousness of their joint commitment and the seriousness of the national problem of illiteracy," noted Librarian of Congress Daniel J. Boorstin in his introductory remarks. Dr. Boorstin congratulated the networks on their partnership, pointing out that in the report Books in Our Future (1984), prepared under the auspices of the Center for the Book, he urged the broadcasting industry to play a more active role in helping society combat "the twin menaces" of illiteracy and aliteracy. Secretary of Education William Bennett and Senator Paul Simon of Illinois also participated in the press conference. Secretary Bennett read a message from President Reagan. A taped message from Barbara Bush, wife of the Vice President, was also presented. Four network officials provided details and answered questions about PLUS. They were James E. Duffy, president of communications, ABC Television Network; Bruce Christensen, president, Public Broadcasting Service; Lloyd Kaiser, president, WQED Pittsburgh; and Joseph Jerkins, chairman, Board

(Continued on p. 394)

Also in This Issue . . .

Delegation from National Library of China arrives 394

Head of National Yiddish Book Center visits 395

Report from FLICC productivity seminar 395

More Science Tracer Bullets are published 395

Calendar 396

National Referral Center publication 396

Senator Paul Simon (D-Ill.) speaking at the press conference on December 10.

ABC/PBS (Continued from p. 393)
of Governors, ABC Television Network Affiliates.

Further information about PLUS is available from the project's co-directors: Margot Woodwell, vice president and station manager, WQED, 4802 Fifth Avenue, Pittsburgh, PA 15213, and John E. Harr, vice president, Office of Communications, ABC, 1330 Avenue of the Americas, New York, NY 10019. Inquiries about outreach participation should be directed to WQED, telephone (412) 622-1491.

The Center for the Book in the Library of Congress, one of 41 national organizations that have endorsed PLUS, was established in 1977 to stimulate public interest in books and reading and to encourage the study of books. Its projects are supported by tax-deductible contributions from individuals and corporations. Further information is available from the Center for the Book, Library of Congress, Washington, DC 20540.

The Library of Congress Information Bulletin is issued weekly by the Information Office of the Library of Congress and distributed free of charge to publicly supported libraries and research institutions, academic libraries, learned societies, and allied organizations in the United States.

Comparable institutions and organizations in other countries may arrange to receive the Bulletin on an exchange basis by applying in writing to the Library's Exchange and Gift Division. All other correspondence should be addressed to the LC Information Bulletin, Information Office, Library of Congress, Washington, DC 20540.

Bruce Tapper, Editor

National Library of China Delegation Visits Library of Congress

Shown above at the Library are (left to right) Warren Tsuneishi, director for area studies, Library of Congress (LC); Qiao Ling, deputy chief, Foreign Relations Section, NLC; John C. Broderick, assistant librarian for research services, LC; William J. Welsh, The Deputy Librarian of Congress; Henriette D. Avram, assistant librarian for processing services, LC; Hu Sha, Deputy Director, NLC, and head of the delegation; Li Daolong, deputy chief, Automation Development Department, NLC; Zhu Nan, chief, Professional Management Division, NLC; Li Rennian, chief, Department of Acquisitions and Cataloging for Western Language Books, NLC; Tao-Tai Hsia, chief, Far Eastern Law Division, Law Library, LC; and Jay Sailey, interpreter, U.S. Information Agency.

A five-member delegation from the National Library of China (NLC), led by Deputy Director Hu Sha, recently made a two-week tour of libraries in the United States, starting at the Library of Congress. The visit marked the latest exchange of official delegations between the two national libraries under the cultural exchange agreements between the United States and China. In May 1984, Deputy Librarian William J. Welsh led a five-member delegation from the Library of Congress on a similar tour of Chinese libraries.

During the visit to the Library, Mr. Hu held discussions with Mr. Welsh on topics of mutual interest, especially the exchange of materials and staff. The NLC delegation was introduced to the Library's current automation and preservation projects, including the Optical Disk Pilot Program. In cooperation with the Library of Congress Professional Association, Mr. Hu gave a special presentation on the National Library of China to a standing-room-only audience in the Mumford Room.

Following its visit to the Library of Congress, the

December 30, 1985

STAFF NEWS

Combined Federal Campaign Achieves Record Contributions

At a reception in the Mumford Room on December 12 marking the conclusion of the 1986 Combined Federal Campaign at the Library of Congress, Associate Librarian Donald C. Curran announced that receipts this year reached a record level of more than $176,000. For the first time, a department won the President's Award, which is given when per capita contributions in a unit exceed $75, and coordinators Mary Buckley and Anita Scala accepted the award for the Office of The Librarian. Three other departments exceeded their goals for the campaign: Processing Services, in an effort directed by Beverly Montgomery, collected $59,642; Research Services coordinator Lloyd Shipley reported a departmental total of $38,693; and the Management Services campaign organized by King Lee yielded $15,659. Management Services exceeded its goal with an accomplishment of 114%, and the effort by the Library as a whole stood at 96% by the end of the campaign.

Donald C. Curran (left); Anita Scala and Mary Buckley, Internal Audit Office, who were CFC coordinators for the Office of The Librarian; and David Wigdor, vice-chair of the campaign.

Pledges are still being made and keyworkers will be happy to receive additional contributions. The campaign slogan, "Give Somebody a Chance," struck a responsive chord for 1,542 contributors, who have helped make the holiday season much brighter for the larger community beyond the Library.

Attention: LC Retirees

The Library of Congress Information Office is seeking volunteers from among retirees to assist with staffing public information desks in the Jefferson and Madison Buildings. If you are a Library of Congress retiree and are interested in giving two or more hours a week, please call (202) 287-5108 or send your name, address, and telephone number to: Nancy Bush, Information Officer, Library of Congress, Washington, DC 20540. More information will be sent you. An introductory program for those interested will be held in late January.

Richard E. Rowberg Is Appointed Chief of Science Policy Research

Richard E. Rowberg was appointed chief of the Science Policy Research Division and senior specialist in Science and Technology in the Congressional Research Service (CRS), effective December 9.

Dr. Rowberg came to CRS from the Office of Technology Assessment where he had served as program manager for the Energy and Materials Program since April 1978. During this period under Dr. Rowberg's leadership, the program completed 12 major assessments for Congress in the areas of energy, advanced engineering materials, and mineral resource technology, as well as five shorter studies. He served as deputy program manager of the same program from September 1975 to April 1978. Prior to that, from 1974 to 1975, Dr. Rowberg was employed by the Federal Power Commission in the Office of Energy Systems. As a physical scientist for this regulatory agency, he performed analyses of energy supply and demand. Dr. Rowberg held the position of faculty associate, research engineer, for the Department of Electrical Engineering of the University of Texas at Austin from June 1969 to April 1974.

From 1957 to 1968, Dr. Rowberg attended the University of California at Los Angeles, receiving his bachelor's, master's, and Ph. D. degrees in physics. He has also received several honors and awards including membership in the Sigma Pi Sigma Physics Honorary Society (1960), the NASA Predoctoral Traineeship (1963-66), and the NSF Faculty Associate Award (1967-71). In addition, Dr. Rowberg has authored numerous publications and has spoken widely on the topics of energy production and use. Dr. Rowberg is a member of the American Physical Society.

Marjorie Kulisheck Retires

Marjorie Kulisheck, executive assignment and classification appeals officer, is retiring on January 3, after 33½ years of Federal service, almost 30 years of which were at the Library of Congress. An open house will be held in her office (LM 651) that day, from 1 to 4 p.m., so that her friends and associates around the Library will have a chance to drop by.

Mrs. Marjorie Kulisheck

Mrs. Kulisheck (known as Marjorie or "Mrs. K" to her friends) joined the Library in August 1957 as a classifier, following wartime service as a classification officer and a few years "on the outside" teaching English. Her knowledge of classification procedures goes back a long way, because she was a section head at the Veterans Administration training returning veterans in the new methods for classifying jobs (pegging the standards to the position and not to the person) in 1949, the year in which the Classification Reform Act was passed. It was that law which provided for supergrades, established the General Schedule, and gave the then-Civil Service Commission (now the Office of Personnel Management) the authority to develop standards for jobs.

Mrs. Kulisheck's long career at the Library of Congress paralleled the development of the classification process in the Federal government, and few people know its ins and outs as well as she. Louis Mortimer, director of personnel, made that point when he noted: "No other person in the personnel process has the knowledge of the programs, the people, and the collections, and their relationship to each other that Marjorie has. . . . She has been invaluable to the agency."

Mrs. Kulisheck left the Classification Office for the newly created Classification Appeals and Review Office in 1972. Her position in that office evolved into her present role as executive assignment and classification appeals officer. Her work with supergrades stayed with her as well, and in 1980 she became executive secretary to the Executive Assignment Council (made up of The Librarian, The Deputy Librarian, The Associate Librarian, and the director of personnel) which determines how supergrade positions are allocated in the Library of Congress. Deputy Librarian William J. Welsh, speaking of his association with Mrs. Kulisheck over the years, said: "Marjorie Kulisheck has a rare combination of talents—intelligence, writing abilities, in-depth knowledge of the Library, and most importantly, personal warmth. She will be missed by her legion of friends."

Glen Zimmerman, Associate Librarian for Management, said: "I have always been impressed with Mrs. K's combining a scholarly, research-oriented intellect with her warm, compassionate respect for people—a rare combination indeed."

When asked what she considered the most rewarding parts of her job, Mrs. Kulisheck replied, "to resolve inequities . . . righting wrongs." She went on to say that trust had to play a large part in her job, and that she always had tried to take a positive approach as she looked at the merits of each case that came before her. She admitted that there were cases that she agonized over, that "some cases bother you more than others."

Don Panzera, formerly president and chief negotiator for AFSCME Local 2910, noted that in 1982 during the controversial attempt by OPM to write new standards for librarians and library technicians, "I developed a great fondness for her . . . she was absolutely indispensable to that effort and did a great service to the Library and to the library profession."

What does a classification appeals officer do when she retires? Mrs. K's answer: "For the first six months I'm going to clean off my desk at home. And then I will finish moving into the house I moved into three years ago!" She has a granddaughter in Key West, Fla., who can expect to see more of her in the future as well. In the more distant future Marjorie said she would like to try her hand at writing ("doesn't everyone?" she asked).

Constance Bradshaw, chief steward of AFSCME Local 2477, summed up the career of Marjorie Kulisheck when she said: "Marjorie Kulisheck is an institution in an institution. Local 2477 commends Mrs. Kulisheck for the professionalism she has displayed in carrying out her duties as executive assignment and classification appeals officer. We believe she took pride in the old adage 'action speaks louder than words.' She is a true asset to the Library of Congress and will be greatly missed. . . ."

—Helen Dalrymple

Katherine L. Howard Retires

Katherine L. Howard, library technician (Book Preparation Section) in the Binding Office of the Preservation Office, Research Services, retired from the Library on August 2 after completing 23 years of Federal service.

Mrs. Howard spent all of her years in Federal employment at the Library of Congress, starting in the former Buildings and Grounds Division in 1962. In 1968 she joined the Subject Cataloging Division as library aid in the Book Control and Preparation Section. During a reorganization, the Book Preparation Unit was transferred to the Binding Office, a part of the Processing Department at that time.

A host of family, friends, and fellow employees presented accolades to Katherine when they joined her for a farewell luncheon at the Washington Hyatt Regency on August 1. Peter Sparks, director of preservation, offered good wishes from the entire staff to Mrs. Howard.

Susie Barfield Receives 20-Year Federal Service Award

For Susie Barfield, supervisory copyright examiner, Literary Section, Copyright Office, who received her 20-year Federal Service Award pin the end of October, something happened along the way that made her "forget all about leaving" the Copyright Office.

"Originally, I wanted to be a lawyer," she says. But because she had dropped out of high school for economic reasons at the age of 16, she thought it might be more realistic to become a legal secretary. So she went to night school, picked up her diploma, and completed a year's course in secretarial training. She came to the Copyright Office in the Library, intending to work here only a year or so, because she thought she wanted to work in the private sector. But before she knew it, 10 years had passed.

Ms. Barfield moved up in the Copyright Office—where she has spent her entire 20 years in Federal service—from renewals and documents clerk-typist to section secretary and secretary to the Assistant Register of Copyrights.

She also went to Federal City College, earning her B.A. in political science in four years while studying at night, then took a year's leave of absence to work on a master's degree at Catholic University.

In the meantime, she continued to advance in her Library career, becoming a copyright examiner in Renewals and Documents and then a senior copyright examiner. In 1979—just a year after she finished four more years of night school at Catholic University, to get her long-sought-after law degree—she was promoted to her current position.

Ms. Barfield spends many of her non-work hours on church activities at the Evangel Temple on Rhode Island Avenue. In addition to attending several services on Sundays and helping out once a month in the toddler nursery, she takes a Bible-school class one evening a week and attends fellowship meetings twice a month in individual church members' homes.

As for that law degree, Ms. Barfield says that once she passes the D.C. bar, she will also probably use the law in counseling work at her church.

Raoul LeMat Earns 20-Year Federal Service Award

Raoul LeMat, assistant chief of the Cataloging Division, Copyright Office, recently received his 20-year Federal Service Award pin.

Mr. LeMat has worked at the Library of Congress since 1965. He assumed his present position in September 1982; he got his first job at the Library of Congress in the Defense Research Division "because he was fluent in Swedish." In fact, he grew up in Stockholm, son of a Swedish mother and an American father. When he came to the United States with his mother at age 15, he spoke almost no English. Plunged into a military school in Staunton, Va., he quickly picked up English. Then he went on to study history and government at the College of William and Mary, where he earned a B.A.

LeMat's two daughters, who are 18 and 16, do not speak Swedish, but one of his "dream trips" is to take a trip with them back to Sweden. But of course "you really can't go back," LeMat said, "there are the golden arches of MacDonald's everywhere in Stockholm; it has changed a lot.

Mr. LeMat loves everything connected with the outdoors, including rock climbing and hiking. He has hiked the full length of the Appalachian Trail. He took up rock climbing after many years of backpacking in West Virginia, where he has climbed Seneca Rocks many times. In New York he has climbed the rocks of Schwenagunk Mountains near New Paltz.

Eric Reid Is Awarded 20-Year Federal Service Pin

Eric Reid, a senior administrative officer in the Copyright Office, recently received his 20-year Federal Service Award pin. For nearly the last 10 years, Mr. Reid has been the budget officer for the Copyright

(Continued on next page)

Office. His budget experience dates back to his days in the U.S. Air Force, when he worked in the budget office at Bolling Air Force Base.

Born in Hearts Delight, Trinity Bay, Newfoundland, Canada, Mr. Reid spent his teenage years playing baseball and soccer for St. Johns, the capital of Newfoundland, and fishing with his grandfather, who was a commercial cod fisherman.

He left Canada at age 20 when his parents moved to Rutherford, N.J., where he joined the U.S. Air Force and remained for four years, during which time he pursued his interest in sports, playing softball for the Bolling Generals and soccer for Hagerstown.

In 1964 he became a U.S. citizen and joined the Library of Congress staff as a mail clerk in the Copyright Office mailroom, followed by positions as a supply clerk; searcher and supervisor in the Materials Control Section; and administrative assistant and senior administrative officer in the Administrative Office, where he has worked for the last 17 years.

Mr. Reid and his wife Shirley met at the wedding of friends; he was the best man and she was the maid of honor. One year later they were married. They live in Montclair, Va., with their two daughters, 13-year-old Erica and 12-year-old Shirleen.

Mr. Reid has been a golf enthusiast for the last 20 years; his house sits adjacent to the Montclair golf course, and nine months of the year he plays golf five days a week. In the Library's spring golf tournament he won The Librarian's trophy, and was runner-up in the fall tournament.

Staff Activities

Richard Anderson, information specialist, Copyright Office, spoke on November 8 in Williamsburg at a meeting of the Virginia Educational Media Association, making two 50-minute presentations on educators' use of copyrighted materials.

Thomas J. Blumer, senior editor in the European Law Division, is the author of "The Pamunkey Tradition: Documenting the Past" recently published by the Mattaponi-Pamunkey-Monacan Consortium of West Point, Va., an organization that seeks to serve the Indians of Virginia on a statewide basis. The publication is intended to enrich the experience of visitors to the Pamunkey Indian Museum in King William, Va. It traces, in both words and illustration, the history of the Pamunkey pottery tradition from the turn of the century to the present. Dr. Blumer's pamphlet is the Consortium's first publishing effort.

George E. Glos, assistant chief, European Law Division, is the author of a chapter entitled "The Legal System of Czechoslovakia" which was published in volume eight of the Modern Legal Systems Cyclopedia (Buffalo, N.Y.: William S. Hein, 1985), under the editorial direction of Professor Kenneth R. Redden, University of Virginia Law School.

Mary Berghaus Levering, chief of the Network Division, National Library Service for the Blind and Physically Handicapped, moderated a panel presentation and discussion on "Building a Nation of Readers: How Individuals Can Become Effectively Involved in the National Literacy Campaign," at a gathering of the American Mothers, Inc., on November 14. The presentation was part of Mrs. Levering's work with the American Library Association/National Library Week effort. Mrs. Levering chairs the NLW National Perspectives Task Force; the American Mothers, Inc., is one of 58 national organizations cooperating with ALA/NLW as a national partner, furthering the mutual goals of books and reading, libraries and literacy.

Patrice Lyon, attorney-advisor, Copyright Office, went to Pittsburgh, Pa., on November 13 as a member of a three-person panel to discuss copyright protection for computer software. The meeting was sponsored by the Community College of Allegheny County.

Marybeth Peters, policy planning advisor, Copyright Office, spoke at a luncheon meeting of Patent Lawyers in the District of Columbia on September 11. She also attended a meeting of the Computer Law Institute in New York on October 16, at which she discussed the registration of computer programs, databases, and mask works.

Marriage Announcement

Tina M. Benoit and Alonzo Douglas were married on November 16 in the New Testament Church, Takoma Park, D.C. Mrs. Douglas is an information-receptionist in the Descriptive Cataloging Division and Mr. Douglas is a delivery contractor for Hub Furniture Stores. Mr. and Mrs. Douglas reside in Lanham, Md.

Chinese (Continued from p. 394)
NLC delegation spent time at the National Agricultural Library and the National Library of Medicine. It then traveled to New York City; Dublin, Ohio; Salt Lake City; and San Francisco to view more of the American library scene.

Head of National Yiddish Book Center Visits the Library

Aaron Lansky, executive director of the National Yiddish Book Center, Amherst, Mass., recently visited the Library. He met with Michael Grunberger, head, Hebraic Section, and Paul Maher, senior descriptive cataloger, Descriptive Cataloging Division, to discuss the use of Library of Congress cataloging for the center's collection of 500,000 Yiddish volumes. The books had been collected in a rescue effort conducted around the country by young enthusiasts of the language when it was realized that many collections of books were being thrown away as the numbers of Yiddish speakers declined. The United States was a major center of Yiddish publishing in the early decades of this century.

Report from the FLICC Seminar on Productivity

An estimated $10 billion was saved in 1984 because scientists and engineers were able to obtain the published articles and technical reports they needed from libraries, according to Dr. Jose-Marie Griffiths. Dr. Griffiths, vice president of King Research, Inc., spoke to participants of a Federal Library and Information Center (FLICC) seminar on productivity held recently at the Library of Congress.

Studies sponsored by the National Science Foundation and the Department of Energy indicate that about 40 percent of the books, 25 percent of the journals, and 17 percent of the technical reports read by scientists and engineers are from libraries.

Another part of the library's value is in identifying needed materials, Dr. Griffiths reported. "If a typical agency or company library would close, it would cost an average of about 40 percent more of a reader's time to locate needed journal articles, books, or reports." More importantly, there would be a resulting 10 percent loss in productivity, she said. "In science and technology, we estimate that this would cost the nation nearly $10 billion annually."

Her speech, which described in statistical terms the substantial contributions that libraries make to organizational productivity, was well received by the audience of nearly 100 mostly Federal librarian and information center personnel.

Another speaker at the September 26 seminar was Duane E. Webster, deputy executive director of the Association of Research Libraries and director of ARL's Office of Management Studies, speaking on "The Use of Assisted Self-Studies to Improve Library Performance." He was followed by E. Jack Kolb, principal Army technical information officer, U.S. Army Material Command, speaking on Information Technology and Productivity Growth." Dr. Stanley J. Bougas, library director, Department of Commerce Library, spoke on "Improving Productivity: How We Did It at Commerce."

The first two meetings on productivity sponsored by FLICC at the Library of Congress, held in the spring, attracted some 400 managers and directors of Federal libraries and information centers and affiliated personnel. The April 10 meeting was a "Workshop on Measuring Productivity in Libraries" and the June 7 meeting was a "Seminar on Productivity: Management and Analysis." The September 26 seminar was a wrap-up session emphasizing the positive aspects of library contributions.

The series on productivity was inspired by the recently articulated emphasis on productivity by the Office of Management and Budget.

More Science Tracer Bullets Published

Copies of the following publications may be obtained free on request from the Science and Reference Sections, Science and Technology Division, Library of Congress, Washington, DC 20540. Copies have also been provided to the Superintendent of Documents for distribution to depository libraries.

LC Science Tracer Bullet: Anorexia Nervosa/Bulimia. ISSN 0090-5232 (TB 85-8). August 1985. Compiled by Hisako Halasz, this guide provides basic reference material on two closely related eating disorders, anorexia nervosa and bulimia.

LC Science Tracer Bullet: Blacks in Science and Related Disciplines. ISSN 0090-5232 (TB 85-5). June 1985. Compiled by Vivian O. Sammons, this literature guide provides basic reference material about the accomplishments of blacks in science, invention, architecture, engineering, medicine, photography, the military and related fields.

LC Science Tracer Bullet: CAD/CAM. ISSN 0090-5232. (TB 85-7). July 1985. Compiled by George
(Continued on p. 396)

Meetings and Events Around the Library

Tuesday, January 7

☐"Reminiscences of an Old-Time Public Librarian," Edward d'Alessandro, Research Services, Library of Congress. Special Interest Group on Library Science, LC Professional Association. Room LM 642, 12:10 p.m. For members and staff.

Sunday, January 12

☐The United States Marine Band presents it annual Chamber Music Series. Coolidge Auditorium, 3 p.m. Free. No tickets are required.

Tuesday, January 14

☐"Research Services for West European Studies," Carol Armbruster, French-Italian area specialist, European Division. Special Interest Group on Foreign Area Studies (West European Area Studies). Room LM 642, 11:30 a.m. For members and staff.

Sunday, January 19

☐The United States Marine Band will perform chamber music. Coolidge Auditorium, 3 p.m. Free. No tickets are required.

Events are open to the public unless otherwise specified.

Tracer Bullets (Continued from p. 395)

D. Havas, this literature guide provides basic reference material about computer-aided design and computer-aided manufacturing.

LC Science Tracer Bullet: Rose Culture. ISSN 0090-5232 (TB 85-10). August 1985. Compiled by T. R. Liao, this guide updates and expands TB 72-7 and provides basic reference material in the collections of the Library of Congress on the cultivation of roses.

LC Science Tracer Bullet: Science Fair Projects. ISSN 0090-5232. (TB 85-9). September 1985. Compiled by Constance Carter, this guide updates TB 78-11 and provides basic reference material to junior and senior high school students and teachers on the planning, preparation, execution, and evaluation of science fair projects.

National Referral Center Publication

Copies of the following publication may be obtained free on request from the National Referral Center, Library of Congress, Washington, DC 20540, provided that requesters enclose a self-addressed mailing label:

Who Knows?—Selected Information Resources on Funding for Higher Education: Scholarships, Grants, Fellowships, Cooperative and Experiential Learning, and Loans. (SL 85-2). October 1985. (38 p.) Compiled by Dennis V. Golden, a student from the Atlanta University School of Library and Information Science, while serving as an affirmative action intern at the National Referral Center, this is a descriptive listing that provides the names, addresses, telephone numbers, and other particulars about 64 organizations that are willing to answer questions or otherwise provide information on the various kinds of funding sources enumerated in the title. Among the particulars given for each organization are its areas of interest, holdings or data files, publications, and information capabilities and services. There is an organization names index.

ISSN 0041-7904 Key title: Library of Congress information bulletin